WELCOME

Dear Colleague:

The racially disproportionate nature of the war on drugs is not just devastating to black Americans. It contradicts faith in the principles of justice and equal protection of the laws that should be the bedrock of any constitutional democracy; it exposes and deepens the racial fault lines that continue to weaken the country and belies its promise as a land of equal opportunity; and it undermines faith among all races in the fairness and efficacy of the criminal justice system. Urgent action is needed, at the state, federal and local levels, to address this crisis for the American nation.¹

The Sixth National African-American Drug Policy Summit, sponsored by the National African-American Drug Policy Coalition (NAADPC) is themed Advancing Policy, Medical, & Public Health Solutions for Drug Addiction, Dependency and Supportive Services: Improving Quality of Life, Public Safety and Alternatives to Criminal Sanctions. The Summit program presents a current approach to address development and implementation of drug policy and programs in the United States that negatively and disproportionately affect African Americans and other disparate populations. Comprised of six plenary sessions and nine workshops, the program brings together experts steeped in various aspects of drug policy from the public, private, and non-profit sectors for this three-day summit. The program will discuss discrimination and disparity in access to health care, identify the reforms needed in criminal justice, sentencing policies, mental health issues; and describe the need for reform of criminal law and sentencing policies that could promote a primary approach as a public health and medical solution to the problems of addiction as a disease and not just as a criminal problem. The Summit will examine criminal prosecution and incarceration for drug crimes resulting from drug addiction and abuse and related mental and public health issues.

Our overarching Summit aims to identify critical policies and strategies necessary to address the problem of drug abuse in the African-American community, increase awareness, present strategies and models that are evidence-based and advocate for action, including governmental, to eliminate disparities in sentencing and strengthen the policy system are augmented by your contribution and your attendance.

We invite you to attend our special event, The Clyde E. Bailey, Sr. Memorial Gala, where we salute our 2010 honorees for their distinguished contributions to the field of substance abuse.

The NAADPC family welcomes you and thanks you for being part of this experience and sharing our commitment. We believe you will benefit from the hard work of the Coalition and its member organizations as we continue our legacy through this exemplary educational program. This Summit and your participation demonstrate the remarkable promise and extraordinary work your attendance and participation represent. We thank you. We believe together we can make a difference.

Sincerely,

Senior Judge Arthur L. Burnett, Sr.
Program Chair

GENERAL INFORMATION

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The National African-American Drug Policy Coalition was the result of task forces created to review discrimination and disparity in access to health care, and address the reforms needed in criminal justice and sentencing policies specifically as applied to dealing with individuals afflicted with substance abuse problems and related mental health issues, and to reform the criminal law and sentencing policies to promote as the primary approach a public health and medical solution to the problems of addiction as a disease and not just as a criminal problem warranting criminal prosecution and incarceration for drug crimes resulting from the drug addiction, abuse and related mental health problems.

To this, the Coalition presents its Sixth National African-American Drug Policy Summit. The overall goal of the Summit is to identify critical policies and strategies necessary to address the problem of drug abuse in the African American community. These strategies and policies would:

- Embrace the protection of the nation's children
- Reduce crime and improve public safety and order
- Enhance public health, and
- Promote the wise and efficient use of scarce public resources.

OBJECTIVES

Experts steeped in various aspects of drug policy from the public, private, and non-profit sectors will join the membership of the NAADPC organizations for three days of synergistic collaboration with the overall objectives to:

- Provide an interdisciplinary research-based overview of the impact of current drug policies and programs on African Americans.
- Identify specific drug abuse policies that should be addressed to ameliorate the problem of drug abuse among African Americans.
- Identify innovative, interdisciplinary, evidence-based strategies for addressing the problem of drug abuse in the African American Community.
- Identify potential drug abuse research and evaluation projects among African American that should be implemented by NAADPC and/or its member organizations.

- Identify effective strategies for communicating recommendations for policy and program changes.
- Discuss specific strategies for implementing pilot projects in seven cities/locations in the U.S. and the Virgin Islands.
- Provide specific training in obtaining funding support for implementation of the pilot projects.
- Provide an overview of funding opportunities for projects to be implemented by NAADPC member organizations.

ABOUT THE COALITION

NAADPC Mission

The National African-American Drug Policy Coalition is a coalition of pre-eminent African-American professional organizations united to promote drug policies and laws that embrace the public health nature of drug abuse and provide a more effective and humane approach to address the chronic societal problem of drug abuse.

The NAADPC provides a non-partisan forum for developing and promoting policies and practices related to substance abuse in the African-American community. The organization will present an interdisciplinary, scientifically grounded perspective, and thereby provide a voice now missing from the highly polarized debate on public health versus punitive approaches.

The NAADPC seeks to harness the energies and resources of the Coalition member organizations to educate and thereby improve policy and practice in major population centers across this country. Such a professional partnership has great potential to make a difference. Accordingly, our strategic objectives are to:

- ➔ Shift public resources into education, prevention, treatment and research programs, which has been proven significantly more effective in reducing drug abuse than the use of expensive criminal sanctions.
- ➔ Enhance provision of substance abuse treatment upon request, particularly for those living at or below the poverty level, including necessary ancillary services and assistance such as mental health care, housing, case management, literacy, job readiness and vocational training, transportation, child care, and peer and family supports.
- ➔ Provide enrichment opportunities and comprehensive health education to youth as a means of preventing drug use and other potentially harmful behaviors.
- ➔ Restore equity to the criminal justice system by addressing the disproportional adverse effect of drug law enforcement on people of color and the poor.
